Agricultural University Scientists Develop Linen Yarn For The First Time In India.

Principal Scientist Dr KP Verma with the linen cloth.

24 October 2017, RAIPUR Scientists at Indira Gandhi Krishi Vishvavidyalaya (IGKV) have developed yarn of linen cloth from flax plant - a first in India. So far, Indian linen fabric manufacturers have had to import yarn due to its unavailability in India. Aiming to increase the yield of linseed, which is another name for flax seed, IGKV scientists carried research and used the stem of linseed plant to develop the linen yarn. The development of this yarn under the research project is expected to boost the handloom and textile sector in the country, which has so far been dependent on imported yarn for linen production.

Let's Enjoy!

Life is a race,
Give it a pace,
In the sun,
Come on and have fun!
You know in the mall,
There is a lovely hall,
Let's go there with all,
Enjoy and stroll.
Don't let boredom,
To let you chase,
Life is a race,
Give it a pace.

To My Teacher

Oh teacher ! you are my treasure,
Though I love to enjoy my leisure,
But to be taught by you is my pleasure.
Our tantrms are like changing weather
That none the else but you can measure.
I figure out a lot and dare to predict
But sometime you are extremely good
And sometimes a little strict.
Nevertheless you are gentle and kind,
I hope my mistake you will never mind.
